5 CHEF AMBASSADORS SELECTED IN 5TH YEAR OF CULINARY PROGRAM

Each year, chefs from across South Carolina are nominated to serve as the state's culinary ambassadors. This year Governor Henry McMaster chose five chefs to participate – in honor of the fifth year of the program.

The 2019 SC Chef Ambassadors and their respective restaurants are:

- Chef Jessica Shillato, The Spotted Salamander in Columbia
- Chef Marc Collins, Circa 1886 in Charleston
- Chef Tania Harris, The Lazy Goat in Greenville
- Chef Kelly Vogelheim, Town Hall in Florence
- Chef Brandon Carter, FARM in Bluffton

"These five chefs are among the best and brightest culinary stars in our state," said Gov. McMaster. "Being named a Chef Ambassador allows these chefs to shine a unique spotlight on not only their exceptional talents, but also on the places in South Carolina where they live. We encourage visitors and locals to make the trip and dine in each of their restaurants to see what South Carolina has to offer."

These chefs embody the best of South Carolina's food scene, both in the quality of their provisions as well as their dedication to incorporating healthy, local grown ingredients into their menus.

"These talented individuals have the opportunity to showcase our state's culinary history," said SC Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers. "From the field to the kitchen and, finally, to your table, our food has deep roots in the great state of South Carolina."

In 2019, the chefs will participate in a number of culinary, agriculture and tourism specific events throughout the Southeast, hosting cooking demonstrations and discussing the numerous offerings found in their locales.

"For the past five years, the Chef Ambassador program has promoted South Carolina's culinary appeal," said Duane Parrish, director of the SC Department of Parks, Recreation & Tourism. "Many visitors are seeking local flavor and tastes when they vacation, and our Chef Ambassador program helps them discover that."

CHEF AMBASSADORS

CHEF MARC COLLINS

Circa 1886 • Charleston

At age 16, Marc worked as a chef apprentice aboard the yacht Paradise II, an experience that inspired him to pursue a culinary degree at the Pennsylvania Institute of Culinary Arts. At 23, he took his first chef position at the Fairmount Hotel, a Triple A 4 Diamond restaurant.

In 2001, Marc moved to Charleston and became Executive Chef of Circa 1886. As the son of an artist, he learned early in life the importance of staying creative. In the culinary field, he continually strives for originality in both food presentation and recipe development.

CHEF BRANDON CARTER

FARM • Bluffton

Born in Ohio and raised in Georgia, Brandon was inspired by the allure of the kitchen during a family trip to Italy at the age of 13. Compelled by the industry's high energy, he took his talents to the Culinary Institute of America, where he graduated in 1999.

As executive chef and partner of FARM, Brandon works tirelessly to connect the dining experience with authentic farm culture. Always cognizant of seasonality and availability of ingredients, he crafts ever-evolving menus that speak to the bounty of the region while paying homage to the many farmers and artisans who inspire him.

SOUTHEASTERN WILDLIFE EXPO

Every year the Department has several major initiatives to connect farmers and consumers. One of our most important events is the Southeastern Wildlife Expo in Charleston. After having just wrapped up a highly successful Agribiz & Farm Expo in Florence, we are getting ready for our next big push.

The Charleston expo combines wildlife and nature through fine art, conservation education, sporting demonstrations, exhibits, and food. Over the years it's become known as SEWE, and it's one of our most productive. We are able to connect with over 40,000 consumers at this one venue.

We are proud to report that this is our 10th year of offering the Certified South Carolina tent and Fresh on the Menu cooking demonstration stage. Several of our Chef Ambassadors will participate in this very popular event. They will provide samples of their innovative, delicious food to the lucky people who attend.

New this year, all the demos will feature farmers — the ones who provided the produce or product that is being cooked! This is to highlight the connection that we have from the farm to the plate—all connected through great food. Our Fresh on the Menu chefs will talk with the farmer about his or her Certified SC produce or product, and about how important it is to buy and use Certified South Carolina whenever you can.

Returning favorites to the stage are TV food personalities The Lee Brothers, Matt Lee and Ted Lee. They will provide commentary on the chefs and the food they are preparing. With six cooking demos each day, visitors to our tent will have plenty of opportunities to see and sample the most innovative cuisine our state has to offer. Who could resist tasting the delicious Certified SC produce and products cooked right in front of you! And the audience members can ask all the questions they want during the demo and then take home a recipe book.

In addition, while in the tent, patrons can explore the Certified SC booths to support our specialty food vendors. Of the 28 vendors, eight are new to SEWE this year, and I'm told there is a waiting list to get in. That tells you how popular our tent is!

It's important to remember that at the root of the delicious, local food we all enjoy are the hardworking men and women who grow and produce it. While in the Certified SC tent, we hope folks take a moment to view the Roots of Your Food campaign videos. Join us in saluting the farmers of South Carolina and their contributions to helping make agribusiness our state's No. 1 industry.

We hope you'll join us at SEWE!

AWARD-WINNING EQUUS FILM FESTIVAL RETURNS TO CAMDEN

The EQUUS Film Festival Tour will return to South Carolina during Camden Film Week, February 18-24.

The award winning films from the EQUUS Film Festival New York are on tour this year, and the Camden event will include film screenings, art exhibits, book signings, panel discussions, and filmmaker meet and greets. Special activities during Camden Film Week include equine arts and filmmaking classes at The Fine Arts Center, local barn tours, Marley's Round Up on The Town Green, and screenings at The Little Theatre.

A series of local equine films including “A Pony and His Boy,” “Natural Humanship” and “Hold Your Horses” will join films from around the world. With the theme of animal rescue and adoption, many events will benefit local organizations. The welcome reception on Feb. 22 will include the screening of “Life in The Doghouse,” a nationally acclaimed documentary that tells the story of Camden locals Danny Robertshaw and Ron Danta and the 11,000 dogs that they have rescued since 2005.

For information contact julianneneal@me.com or call (803) 351-0223 or visit equusfilmfestivalcamden.com. For advance tickets go to camdenfilmweek.eventbrite.com. For updates, go to Facebook @EquusFilmFestivalCamden.

CULINARY PROGRAM

CHEF JESSICA SHILLATO

Spotted Salamander • Columbia

Jessica took an interest in cooking at an early age. Food, cooking and sharing meals were always a big part of her life growing up. Being surrounded by a family of wonderful cooks inspired her to become a professional chef. Jessica is classically trained in the culinary arts, holding two degrees from Johnson and Wales University, Charleston Campus.

In 2014, she opened Spotted Salamander Café in the Robert Mills District of Columbia where, as the owner, she is committed to making fresh, local Southern cuisine with an inventive twist.

CHEF TANIA HARRIS

The Lazy Goat • Greenville

Tania Cienfuegos Harris attended culinary school in Mexico City where she studied Culinary Arts in the Colegio Superior De Gastronomía for four years to earn her culinary bachelor's degree. It was after graduating that Tania discovered her love for pastries, cakes and bread—and working with chocolate and sugar.

She is now the pastry chef at The Lazy Goat. Being in South Carolina has helped Tania gain a wider understanding of how important local farmers and local produce are when it comes to influencing the community and the culinary scene in Greenville.

CHEF KELLY VOGELHEIM

Town Hall • Florence

Originally from Michigan, Kelly is now the Executive Chef of Town Hall Restaurant and Bar. Her passion for food began early, as she cooked with her mother and grandmother at home. Kelly earned her associate degree in the Culinary Arts at the Great Lakes Culinary Institute in Traverse City, Michigan, and continued to grow in her career.

After moving to South Carolina, she landed her position in Florence, which she is proud to call home.

ABOUT THE SC CHEF AMBASSADOR PROGRAM

Tourism and agriculture have a significant impact on South Carolina, contributing tens of billions of dollars to the state's economy each year and accounting for hundreds of thousands of jobs statewide.

The Chef Ambassador program was established to create greater unity between these two major industries, while enhancing the overall promotion of South Carolina as a top culinary destination. The initiative of Governor Nikki Haley enacted in 2014 highlights the state's talented chefs, creative recipes, authentic cuisines, locally grown produce and unique products.

EXPO HELPS FARMERS & AGRIBUSINESS INDUSTRY

BY MARSHA HEWITT

FLORENCE—This year’s Agribiz Expo was one of the most successful yet, with about 3,000 people participating in the two-day event.

Director Jody Martin was extremely pleased with the turnout. “These were all ag-related people--farmers and agribusiness leaders. We estimated that about half of them over the two days were farmers.”

He reported good participation in almost every venue. “We have to realize that there are not but so many farmers out there,” he said.

The two keynote speakers connected well with the crowd at the opening session, and the breakout sessions were well attended. Martin reported that vendors were happy with the connections they made.

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU PRESIDENT ZIPPY DUVALL

Breakfast speaker Zippy Duvall, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the crowd that Farm Bureau has a significant presence in Washington.

“This administration has welcomed us. We have a seat at the table.”

A former dairyman from Greensboro, Georgia, Duvall has a good relationship with the US Secretary of Agriculture. “Sonny Perdue has a dream team; they are all farmers,” he said.

“When President Trump wanted to do away with NAFTA, we made sure they didn’t do harm to farmers,” Duvall said. He also reported great success with the Farm Bill. “We fixed a lot of things that were wrong. It’s a really good Farm Bill.”

He commented on several issues that concern farmers. He called a water usage proposal “the largest land grab by the federal government in the history of our country.”

Duvall urged farmers to “read the new rule and comment. Environmentalists want to take your rights away. If you love ag, you’d better comment.”

The biggest problem facing farmers is a lack of labor, he continued. “If we don’t find answer to labor, farmers are restricted in their ability to expand.”

He also explained farm bureau’s position on the border issue. “Our organization supports a secure border. We need a workable guest worker program. Looking at the president’s policies, they go along with ours.”

To the rest of the country, farmers mean freedom, he concluded. “We do the work that makes 98 percent of the population free to do what they want.”

MICHELE PAYN, CHAMPIONING AGRICULTURE

When she’s not flying around the country advocating for agriculture, dairy farmer Michele Payn milks cows. She is a Holstein breeder, an author, and the founder of Cause Matters Corporation, an entity that champions farmers.

“We are in the people business,” she told the group at the opening breakfast. Her goal is to create a human connection with consumers who don’t know anything about farming.

Because of social media, many people think that big corporations own farms that produce food. Environmental groups like PETA lead the conversation about animals and food.

“Agriculture is not represented by farmers,” she said. “Consumers don’t know where food comes from; they fear their food because of a lack of understanding.”

Issues like GMOs, antibiotics, and organic farming are confusing, and emotions play a big part in social media messages. To counteract misinformation, agriculture professionals think they need to educate people, Payn said.

“We think we have all the answers, but that comes across as arrogant. We need to connect with people on their level. Foodies want to know who grows their food, and who is on the other side of the plate,” she explained.

Decisions and legislation about agriculture are made by people who are not farmers. “Truth in agriculture needs to be celebrated,” she said. She urged farmers to start their own social media pages so that consumers learn the truth about food and how it’s grown.

Dupre Percival presided over a station at the Taste of SC.

The trade show floor was filled with cutting edge equipment and essential information.

Photos by Marsha Hewitt and Denise Attaway

Tractor 101 was designed for women farmers.

Vendors offered a variety of products and information to a steady stream of farmers.

Zippy Duvall, Jody Martin and Larry McKenzie shared a moment at the opening session’s breakfast.

AG COUNCIL TO HEAR ABOUT ACRE

The first meeting of the SC Agricultural Council this year is scheduled for Thursday, February 21, at the SC Farm Bureau office in Cayce. Registration will begin at 11 a.m., with lunch to follow.

Kyle Player, project coordinator of External Affairs and Economic Development for the SC Department of Agriculture, will give a presentation on the Agribusiness Center for Research and Entrepreneurship (ACRE) and Land Access programs.

“We are looking forward to more great meetings and two more fun tours planned for 2019,” said ag council secretary-treasurer Steve Slice. “Although we have a few ideas, please contact any member of the executive committee to suggest a meeting topic and or a tour destination.”

The cost of the meeting, which includes a catered lunch, is $15. To reserve a spot, send your check by February 18 to SC Ag Council, P.O. Box 2683, Columbia, SC 29201-2683.

Dues for 2019 are $25, and the fee for each quarterly meeting is $15, which includes lunch. To pay annual dues along with prepaying the four quarterly meetings, the total cost is $55. Members have priority seats on the on the bus tours.

“Tell your friends about the Ag Council,” Slice said. “Spread the word that we are relevant to their job if they work in the field of agriculture, and to their life personally if they eat food!”

For more information contact Slice at scagriculturalcouncil@gmail.com or 803-360-2845.
